04:20

Oh yeah. And I saw the Toyota parked out front this morning too. And neither one of us own a Toyota. Okay.

04:29

There's a long story behind that. I told you about that. And I already heard it tonight.

04:31

04:35

I couldn't help it.

04:36

But are you guys doing that love connection thing on the on the radio they sometimes sometimes when they call in they don't call in like they used to know I think

04:42

Sometimes sometimes when they call in, they don't call in like they used to know I think everybody got married. We know Sandy and Jennifer. We got with our biggest success probably a sandy and Jennifer who we introduced over the air right at a year. Go. And they're still together just happy as ever is happy that can't do it for ourselves, but we can do it for other people.

 05:07

And we know someone called in and asked asked us if we're how our barbecue went with Sandy, Jennifer, and never happened. No one brought the barbecue pit. Yeah, and Sandy and Jennifer didn't even show up. You wait.

 05:21

A little pig. Well, you're asking what do you thought that the reason was for most relationship breakups. Okay. What do you think most of them? I can tell you what, from my own experience, I think an awful lot of people go into relationships, sometimes for for a lot of the wrong reasons in one leg out the door. Yeah, you know, there's a lot of I don't know why there seems to be it's almost like roommates that have sex. Ah,

 05:54

it'll never happen. Don't

 05:56

you look at me, girl. I've seen that lusty thing after you eat? Or is that drool?

 06:04

I mean, that's not drew

 06:05

followed me around the house to the fork.

 06:08

spot drill, I promise you.

 06:11

I'm gonna pit you naked cutting the grass next time. Anyway, share, and the reason why I personally feel that relationships don't work is because both people cannot come to a common agreement. And like Sean had said, you have to make a commitment. It has to be there. There has to be communication, there has to be respect. There has to be in any relationship. Roommate lover, mother, father, brother, sister.

06:37

I think for me even more important even than the monogamy issues, the loyalty?

06:42

Exactly what are you going to get out of it? Yeah, honesty, the communication, just the rifle of the point where two people want the same thing?

06:53

Well, you know, what was really interesting was, I saw something on TV the other day, where they interviewed a bunch of people who've been married, heterosexual have been married for like 56 years, and what and when the first thing that they said that they had to do to make their relationship work was to make their, the family to the, you know, the family that they came from second and make the new family first. And see, and that's I think, real hard for a lot of gay people because of the homophobia and not telling the family what's going on. And that kind of thing. I think there's that's a big piece of it.

07:33

I would have to say it's, it's communication and compromise. i The only thing I disagree with you, Howard a little bit is that I don't think you have to, like the same things or, or the same things

07:46

what as long as you're able to the relationship will

07:48

maybe want the same things out of the relationship, but you have to be able to communicate about if you don't like things or want the same things or that I mean, I think when I mean those things, you're not sure. But I mean, but but if you can come to some mutual mutual understanding about the space people need or, or once again, that all those kinds of things can see indication and a little bit of contact with two people have to sit down and say, This is what I expect from you. This is what you expect from me, that's communication.

08:13

08:20

The time people don't say any of it exactly. And with all these unspoken expectations, and think it's all going to happen, like it happened in their family. And if those expectations don't meet, then the same people don't want those two people don't want the same things out of a relationship. And that'll never work. And of course, that can be in general terms. Also, you know, Sharon, you bring up an interesting point about, you know, putting your family, your native family second, and how hard that is. One of the things that, you know, it's really important to consider here too, is that as gay and lesbian people, we're often already separated from that family. And we've already, like, supplanted that or replaced it with our own little group of friends or a little clique or something else, some other support group. And so sometimes it's real hard to push the friends aside a little bit to make room for the relationship to develop. So that you know, like, when the weekend comes, you've got your time set aside for your lover. Right. And your friends understand that. No, they haven't been booted aside that yet this time with your lovers very special time for you. I mean, I've found that you know, that was really difficult for me and you know, a lot of suit a lot of friends feel that you know, they've been replaced or you know that you've forgotten about them and it's not necessarily true. Well, extended families are just as important to gay people as you know, the families that they came from.

08:29

08:40

09:43

09:54

They may have been put aside a little bit while this, you give this relationship with Chance, and you put the work and the energy and the effort into making it happen. And I was just telling me that he's the other day, as a matter of fact, on Thursday, he was and he has a new relationship. And he said, he feels that a lot of his friends, he just doesn't make the contacts and, you know, feels like I should be doing listen to what he said, I'm happy right now, where I am and what I'm doing in the time and the energy and the effort. I want it to be right there where it is. And so at that point, I, you know, yeah, there does have to be a little step aside time and your friends really understand you, or their family, your friends, I mean, they should be happy for you that you're, you know, you can say to me, you know, this is important, I'm really working in this relationship. We're already friends, you know, trust me on this, you know, they start calling you, you feel like, you know, you're invited with the group and stuff like that. And it's, you know, at some point, it needs to become clear that you're more than that now, and that they need to consider that, you know, when they invite you, sometimes the invitation does need to include your partner, you know, are these single friends you're telling you about? Yeah, yeah. I mean, to be quite honest, I don't really jealous. I don't know, I don't know many people in, in a committed relationship. It's real difficult. I mean, Shawn, and I have gone through this, this searching process, we've tried to find, you know, like, another couple out there. So that we can do out a couple things. And we don't even know what that means. But we know that we're interested in like meeting other people who've been through the same process that we've been going through. And it's real difficult. There aren't a lot of models out there.

10:44

11:36

But you know, that I think the same thing is true in the heterosexual world. Sure. I mean, when when a young couple, you know, and that's what the bachelor party and the bachelorette thing and they do this, they do that and then all of a sudden, then they have to find couples, because you're, you're, you're doing totally different things, all the old guys, you know, still going to the sports bar and doing this and doing that and whatever, whatever. And they keep wanting you to go and you have this new thing in your life. And so they really need you'll find them start to bond and bind with other newly married couples are just had a baby or this, they begin to kind of and some of the other gang until they kind of get married and give it to them. They're all kind of back together again. It's amazing. Scott, speak to me.

12:21

What do you want me to say big daddy? You know, we got a call from a guy in New Caney. Do you know what that is? It's up in montgomery county. Its way north of 59 I think Yeah. Might be at 45. I think it's like 59 says he loves the show. He's a new listener. And it's even more wild out there. If the rednecks find out. You're gay. They have to be very, very careful out there. I'll bet they do. But then you imagine, I want to know like Richmond Rosenberg. I want to know what size boots that James wears. Because, you know, he wears baits if he lives out in new Caney.

12:55
