Wensum. However, due to its location, few people went Giovanni's and it was always on the verge of bankruptcy. Today, Giovanni's is alive and well. It has been taken over by a young men and women who have moved it right into the center of town. There are people in the store seven days a week from the morning morning until nine at night. The shelves are overflowing with current and classic novels, biographies, books on politics, religion, the gay movement, and sexuality. There are racks with several dozen newspapers and magazines, non sexist children's books, and books for young adults. A wide array of T shirts, buttons, postcards, note paper, and whatnot can also be found. The stereo plays the latest records by gay women and men. Ed, Herman's and Arlene Olsen have really worked to create the positive atmosphere at the bookstore. They are barely making enough money to survive. But both are very happy to have invested their energy in Giovanni's Edie says, Well, I suppose it is a bit unrealistic having a gay ghetto job. But it sure is pleasant to spend so much of my life with gay people. Arlene feels it has been beneficial to her. It's really interesting to meet and listen to all the customers. Neither of us ever knew so many people before Edie used to manage a small food business and Arlene worked in a craft shop. Many volunteers helped them to staff the store so it can remain open 12 hours a day. They all see Giovanni's as a community service. The bookstore is is a way to provide gays with the material they want in a pleasant non exploitive atmosphere. Giovanni's Room also serves as an information exchange with bulletin boards full of notices of local meetings, concerts, discussion groups, and movies.

02:21

If you decide you want to meet gay people, the easiest way to do so is through a public gay function, a dance church service or coffee house for example. The organizations which sponsor these activities run on volunteer labor, so don't be afraid to pitch in. Working together on a project with others is an excellent way to make new friends. If you're sincerely interested, most lesbians and gay men will go out of their way to answer your questions or help you find someone who can many groups also have speakers bureaus and will arrange for gay speaker to talk with school church or other community groups. You can find gay and lesbian organizations in your area through gay directories, your local library, or even through the telephone book.
