- Just sometimes you'll see a panel that you never noticed before and you read what it says on it. There's a panel that was for a person who died the day before his 23rd birthday. And there's a poem that has kind of stuck with me, and it was what if I had all the time in the world, what would I do with this, bottle like perfume. And if I did have all the time in the world, what would I ask of it, to build me a dream. And that poem has stuck in my head since I first saw that panel three months ago. And it always keeps coming to mind because it mimics a lot of the things that I think because I'm not even 22 yet. And the same things go through my mind, what if I had the time in the world, what would I do with it?
